

I am the founder of Epilepsy Advocates and I would like to see warning labels put on television shows that have flashing lights. There are millions of people in the world that have photoconvulsive/photosensitive epilepsy. If someone with photoconvulsive/photosensitive epilepsy were to see a television show with flashing lights there is a chance that they could go into a seizure which can progress to status epilepticus and possibly be life threatening. Please put warning labels on television shows.